Cargo Way is an industrial boulevard that runs between Third Street and Jennings Street, terminating at Heron's Head Park. It is also part of the Bay Trail and the City's Blue Greenway, providing access to the Bay and other open spaces. Currently, Cargo Way serves trucks and commercial vehicles fulfilling the cargo and maritime needs of the Port and the India Basin Industrial Park, however it has discontinuous, narrow sidewalks and lacks pedestrian amenities.

There may be an opportunity to transform an industrial boulevard into a bike and pedestrian-safe community greenway that links public transit on Third Street to Heron's Head Park and other open space along the Bay, while continuing to serve the industrial maritime needs of India Basin Industrial Park and the Port. A redesign of Cargo Way might include: new landscaping, widened sidewalks, improved lighting and signage, enhanced bicycle facilities, and paving materials and planting to improve management of stormwater run-off.

The San Francisco Redevelopment Agency, collaborating with the Port of San Francisco, and the Mayor's Office of Greening, will be engaging with the community in a planning process to develop a conceptual design for the improvement of Cargo Way over the next few months. A successful plan will require the vision and input of local stakeholders and community members. The Agency, the Port and the Mayor's Office of Greening look forward to working with the community to shape a greenway that maximizes access to the Bay and open spaces and helps keep our city clean and green.
